The recently-passed Family First Prevention Services Act (FFPSA) includes a number of provisions to prevent children from entering foster care by allowing federal reimbursement for mental health services, substance use treatment, and in-home parenting skill training. During this forum, attendees will learn important information regarding the changes in the law, specifically focusing on the limitation of the use of residential care for children and youth served by the child welfare system. Presenters will discuss potential impacts of the law on both a national and state level.
